

One sun shines on the Moravian vineyards, however, they give wines of endless diversity, which outstand with their fruity taste and spiciness, wide spectrum of aroma and typical full taste. The diversity of Moravian wines is given by a surprising number of varieties, variability of countryside and terroir of vineyards. When you start to reveal the magic of Moravia, you will be surprised by a great many variants, experiences and inspiring encounters.

FROM THE HISTORY TO PRESENT DAYS

Viticulture in South Moravia is among the oldest in Europe; vine has been grown here probably since the period of the Celts and experts claim that nowhere else in the world you could find as many small wine cellars as there. Already in medieval ages Moravian wines had a good name; they were distributed over the entire Moravia and Bohemia, supplied to manors and burghers' houses and they were also highly demanded in Poland and in Silesia.

When in 1325 King John of Luxemburg ordained that from grape harvest up to Easter it is not allowed to serve Austrian wines in Brno, the experienced wine-tasters were put to the town gateways. If we search a proof for the fact that wine from South Moravia has always had unmistakable character, here it is – the wine-tasters on the spot tested the origin of imported wines and allowed only Moravian wines to enter the town. Just as the present lovers of Moravian wines they also could pick out mature and juicy acids, rich extractive agents, spiciness and distinct aroma of melon grapes. Cups, branches, grapes and leaves of vine as well as vineyard knives were often depicted on the town and municipal emblems of Moravian towns and country-towns. Mikulov has in its emblem two curved vineyard knives, there is a grape on the Hustopeče town seal, also there was an original document preserved from 1580, which allowed the village of Dolní Dunajovice to use the emblem with the wine topic.

Although since the 13th century vineyards have been established in Moravia with grape varieties from France and Germany, only cuvée were made at that time, prepared according to traditional customs. Sylvaner, so called "Morávka" used to be probably the most

VARIETIES

The Moravian white wines are characterised by an interesting aroma, rich extractive agents and harmonious combination full of taste with fresh acids. Red wines are thanks to the modern processing technology full-bodied and distinct, in taste and aroma accomplished by fruity, smooth velvety tones. A common sign for white and red wines is an extraordinary varied spectrum of varieties.

grown white variety of those days. Also Blauer Portugieser, which Count de Fries brought from Portugal to Austria in 1772, used to be very popular. Červenopičák, Jakubské, or Modrý Janek are the varieties which vanished due to the phylloxera calamity at the beginning of

MORAVIAN WINE TRAILS

More than a thousand kilometres long network of well-marked cycling trails interlaces the area of all the Moravian wine sub-regions. Wine trails zigzag between vineyards and orchards, connect the most charming places in the Moravian countryside and do not omit one single landmark. Thanks to them you will get to know the Moravian country as a country of picturesque landscape, unique historic monuments and excellent wine. Cycling routes usually lead along quiet roads, somewhere on dirt and forest roads and you can go on them by mountain as well as standard road bikes.

Authors of the idea of wine trails involved 250 wine municipalities into this project, marked 1,200km of routes and issued special maps for individual trails. On every one of them you will find enough information not only about interesting places in the region, length of individual trails, but also about their altitude profile and surface. All trails are marked by a common logo, which differs by colour according to individual trail. Interesting sites and services near the trails are marked by information signposts, in wine municipalities you can find information about opened wine cellars, municipal vinothèques and other points of interest. Ten tourist circuits offer a number of combinations for trips and several days long stays, full of active exercise, pleasant experiences and adventure.

You will get guaranteed service level in the facilities marked with the logo of wine tourism certification. These include also accommodations with wine themes and restaurants with wine. www.vinazmoravyvinazcech.cz.

During the past decades Moravian viticulture went through quite revolutionary changes. Vineyards are cultivated in an environment-friendly way, the majority of wineries introduced modern regardful technology of grape processing, Moravian winemakers regularly reach success at international exhibitions.

VINEYARDS – SOIL

The Moravia Wine Region is composed of four sub-regions: Znojmská, Mikulovská, Velkopavlovická and Slovácká. It involves circa 96 % area of vineyards in the Czech Republic, whilst the total area of vineyards in Moravia represents 17,529 hectares.

Diverse geological origin and soil conditions, climate differing from the majority of European wine-growing regions and very ragged countryside relief – these are three main reasons why just Moravia offers unique and endlessly miscellaneous wines, which stand out thanks to their full-bodied taste and especially gentle spiciness from matured, but not over-ripe grapes, enhancing their freshness. The last twenty years Moravian viticulture went through a big quality development and our wines today are among the top in Europe.
